A BIOGRAPHY OF
CHARLES WESLEY HUBBARD

G. H. Redford, comp.

Presented to Goodspeed's Book Shop by Roberta Hubbard Costley, Great-Granddaughter of Charles Wesley Hubbard, and present president of the Charles Wesley Hubbard Organization. October 1, 1962.

CHARLES WESLEY HUBBARD

Born February 4, 1810 — Died December 19, 1903

This book of Charles Wesley Hubbard and his three wives, Mary Ann Bosworth, Mary Edwards, Sophia Pollard, and their descendants, grew out of the idea of Golden W. Robbins, son of Lucynthia Hubbard Robbins, who desired to know his relatives. This book preserves a record of the names and the descendants of Charles Wesley Hubbard. It is for the information of those now living and those who are yet to be born. A member of each family was asked to gather the information of their respective families and this information was compiled by Gwen Hubbard Redford, and special acknowledgment is given to her and to the following who helped to gather the information:

George and Myrtle Nuhn	Verda Lowe Walquist
Clark L. Hubbard	Rhoda Merrill Jones
Stella Barker Cook	Rae Hubbard White
Margaret Hubbard Wood	Roberta Hubbard Costley
Jesse L. Hubbard	Golden W. Robbins
Dr. Lester A. Hubbard	Cora Taylor Brooks
Elsie Lessey Hinckley	Gwen Hubbard Redford
Altha Taylor Gudmundson	Charles W. Hubbard
Clara Hubbard Chaffee
Wesley W. Hubbard and his wife Edith Hubbard

The book contains a history of Charles Wesley Hubbard and of his three wives, Mary Ann Bosworth, Mary Edwards, Sophia Pollard, and the names of their descendants, a record of births, deaths, marriage, occupation, some of their achievements, and addresses.

We were unable to get a complete record of some persons who are scattered in far away states, thus making the book unavoidably incomplete. We also wish to state that unavoidable mistakes may have been made in copying and interpreting the writing of the family records sent to us. This book is not being compiled by skilled publishers or editors, but nevertheless it is a valuable record. At the time of printing this book, there is only one living child of Charles Wesley Hubbard, who is Gwen Hubbard Redford, affectionately called by us Aunt Gwen and without her information and without her work and those of the living descendants of Charles Wesley Hubbard, such a record could not be compiled, and it is gratifying to know that this book is being published now while the information is available.

At the Hubbard Family Reunion held in 1953, a committee was appointed to take charge of publishing and financing the book. Members of the committee are as follows:

Chairman: Charles W. Hubbard
Golden W. Robbins
George C. Nuhn
Marguerette Hubbard Keller
Clark L. Hubbard

EXPLANATION

The number before each name designates the number of the individual in the family, and is given where the name appears.

The letter accompanying each name indicates the generation, e.g. A=1st, B=2nd, C=3rd etc. and is given wherever the name appears.

The names are all grouped in families.

A Biography of Charles Wesley Hubbard

Charles Wesley Hubbard, one of Utah's early pioneers, was born February 7, 1810, on a farm in Sheffield, Berkshire County, Massachusetts. With an ancestry that traces back to 1633 in America, he was truly an American. His father, Noah Hubbard, was an honest, ambitious and progressive farmer, who owned the land on which his family raised chiefly wheat and grapes. To acquire larger profits from his own crops and also to assist his neighbors with theirs, Noah built a flour mill and a winery.

Charles' mother was called the "Doctor Lady," and since she was often away from home to take care of her patients, her oldest daughter, Pamela, assumed much of the responsibility of taking care of the home and the family.

In a good home and under favorable circumstances, Charles, who was the oldest son, grew to manhood, learning to do the work on the farm and also the work required in the flour mill. This training which he received while he was young gave him experience which he could apply later in life when he migrated to Utah.

Although he was of medium height and was a strong young man with brown eyes and hair, he was not handsome; but he possessed personal qualities which were admirable. He was a hard worker; was honest, ambitious and determined when he was convinced that he was right.

In his early twenties he went to Michigan to visit his Aunt Lucy Hubbard Bosworth, who had a sixteen-year-old daughter, Mary Ann. This tall and stately girl appealed strongly to Charles, who fell in love with her. With the approval and help of his Aunt Lucy, who knew his excellence and worth, he won and married Mary Ann in 1832. After the marriage, the young couple rode horseback to Sheffield, where Charles resumed his work with his father. We have no definite evidence — family tradition.

Shortly after he and Mary Ann returned to Sheffield, they met some Mormon missionaries and were both converted to Mormonism. After becoming a member of the Church and reading the Word of Wisdom, Charles threw away his tobacco and never touched it again, demonstrating his faith, sincerity and self-control.

After Charles and Mary Ann were baptized, they soon left their comfortable home to join other members of the Church. Although the name of the place where they went is not now known, it seems that their living conditions were much less desirable than they had been at Sheffield. Mary Ann, telling of their experiences, said that their home was not much more than a hut, with oiled paper at the windows and a heavy cloth over the door. It was at this place that their first child, Noah, was born, but he soon died because of the cold and exposure.

In the meagre account of this period, it is recorded that Charles and Mary Ann, who were grieved because of the loss of their child, were determined to gain the necessities of life for their future family. With the assistance of Mary Ann, who taught school, he soon acquired a more comfortable home. That they were in Far West at one time and were living comfortably is recorded in the Journal of Heber C. Kimball, who had moved to this place from Kirtland. The following item is included in the Journal, July 1837, p. 53:

“When we moved to Far West from Kirtland, the brethren were very kind to me and my family, giving us many of the necessities, and Charles W. Hubbard gave me 40 acres of land.” On page 84 of the same Journal is recorded:

“On the 18th Charles Hubbard sent a boy with a wagon and span of horses to my house to start us on our journey. Our trunks were put in the wagon by some of the brethren who had come to bid us farewell.”

When the Saints were driven out of Far West, Vilate Kimball, wife of Heber C., stated that “My husband was away and Brother and Sister Hubbard helped and befriended me.”

In the Journal History of the Church is also included the brief entry that on May 6, 1839, Charles Hubbard and thirteen others were given sanction to accompany the Apostles to Europe, but there is no record of their going.

From this time until they began their journey across the Plains, only a brief account of their experiences has been preserved. They were driven out of Far West and went with other Saints to Nauvoo. In the winter of 1846, they were at Winter Quarters, where they suffered because of the cold, hunger, and sickness. Recalling their diet, which consisted of cornmeal bread, mush and bacon, Charles remarked: “It wasn’t the food that kept us alive, but our faith in God and the hope for the future.”

Although Charles and his family had prepared to go West in 1847, he was asked to help build a flour mill at Winter Quarters, and it seems that he remained for that purpose. In the following spring, April 7, 1848, Charles, Mary Ann, their six-weeks old baby Julia and five other children started their journey to Utah with the Heber C. Kimball Company. To make this long trip Charles had acquired two wagons. The one which he drove was drawn by oxen; the other driven by Mary Ann was drawn by horses.

They had not gone far before an accident occurred, which added to their many inconveniences and problems on the way. Their three-year-old son, Heber, fell from one of the wagons and was run over. At first they feared that the boy would not live. He was so badly injured that he had to be carried on a pillow all the way to Utah; but with parental care and good nursing, he recovered.

Of their other experiences while they crossed the Plains, the following items were recorded or recalled by members of the family. Their company, which had been organized as others were, traveled approximately twenty miles a day except on Sunday, when they rested. As they traveled they joined with others of the company in singing and celebrations. Charles helped build bridges and make roads, and assisted with whatever else was necessary to be done on the journey. That he and another man went back on the trail to warn another company to be on guard against Indians reported to be in ambush, is mentioned in the Church records.

Soon after he and his family arrived in Salt Lake City, happy to be at the end of the journey, he was called, because of his early training in milling, to go to Ogden to assist Lorin Farr and Harmon Perry build and manage a flour mill, the first one in that settlement. It was built on the banks of Ogden River, where water power could be used. Here Charles built a two-room log house for the family to live in.

The mill soon became a project that flourished, especially during the 1850's, when the demand for flour was greatly increased by emigrants going to California because of the gold rush. Seeing an opportunity to make large profits because of the demands for flour, Farr and Perry wanted to skyrocket the price. Charles objected to charging an unreasonable price for flour, since it might mean death to some persons. "Live and let live" was his policy. When the other two men persisted and were two against one, they raised the price and Charles sold his share of the mill to them. His sense of what was right would not let him remain in the business with men whose principles differed from his own.

Believing that California, where his brother Clark had gone, offered attractive opportunities, he then bought wagons and supplies, and planned to join him. His wife, Mary Ann, however, objected strenuously. Apparently, it was through her persuasion, faith and prayers that he changed his mind, and, in 1851, they moved to Willow Creek in Box Elder County, the town later named Willard.

Church records give us this bit of information:

In January 1851, at a conference in Ogden, when Brigham Young was present, Charles was chosen counselor to Erastus Bingham, Bishop of the North Ward. In June 1852, he was ordained Bishop of Willow Creek Branch by Heber C. Kimball and Willard Richards.

Soon after Charles had come to Willow Creek with the earliest settlers there, he bought, north of the townsite, a tract of land subsequently known as the North Farm. As soon as he could, he built within the townsite a two-story rock house, which still stands one block west of the main highway.

He was a hard worker and a good manager. He hated a lazy man. When anyone would say, "Brother Hubbard, you work too hard," he would reply, "I would rather wear out than rust out." His belief in the importance of labor and frugality he impressed on the minds of his children. As soon as his sons John and Heber were big enough, they worked with their father as did his other sons later. To meet the needs of his growing family, he bought more land, on which he cultivated his crops and raised livestock. Land within the townsite was obtained and homes were built for John and Heber who had both married and had families.

As a result of his industry and good management, he often produced good crops when those of his neighbors failed. One year when the crops of most of the people in the community failed to mature because of the drouth and grasshoppers, he raised one thousand bushels of wheat. Although prices increased considerably and he had an opportunity to make large profits from his grain, he would not sell it, but gave it to his neighbors in need, some of whom had inadequate food supplies for the winter and others who were faced with starvation unless assistance was provided for them. In order to have more to give to those in need, he required his family, when they made their own bread, to mix wheat flour with that of other grains.

He shared with his friends and neighbors and with strangers and Indians, too. In the early days when people traveled with teams and wagons, they were always welcome to camp at his place, where all were made welcome, given food, a place to sleep, and feed for their teams.

His generosity, however, did not originate in an indifference to the worth of material things. He believed in enjoying the necessities of life, but he also believed in being frugal. There was little waste, if any in his home or on his farm. He objected to a crust of bread being thrown away, even if it were fed to some animal. "Waste not, want not" was his slogan.

He manifested interests in community activities and devoted much of his time and energy in promoting the welfare of the local group. He sponsored, and usually was one of the speakers at celebrations of the Fourth and Twenty-fourth of July. On May 14, 1853, he was appointed the first Postmaster in Willow Creek. As Bishop of the Ward, he supervised the building of a rock wall around the settlement to serve as a protection against the Indians. This wall was to be eight hundred and eighty rods long and seventy rods wide and six feet high when completed. When Wilford Woodruff visited the settlement in December, 1854, 40 rods were completed. At this time Charles was making a strenuous effort to secure a teacher for the school during the winter, as there had been little schooling in the settlement during the past three years. Charles had had little formal schooling himself, but he was eager that others should have the advantages of school training if possible.

In 1855 Church authorities advised him to take a second wife, but he preferred not to do so, saying: "No, I don't want another wife. I love the wife of my youth, and she is all I want." Because of his position in the Church, his financial standing, and insistence of the Church authorities, he decided to obey their counsel. He consulted Mary Ann, who, because of her great faith and confidence in Church leaders, consented to his plural marriage. Even after this approval he accepted with reluctance any event, circumstance, or excuse, which he could use to avoid the marriage.

About this time, September 1855, Mary Edwards, a good-looking Welsh immigrant came to Willard. After consulting with Mary Ann, he decided to become acquainted with this young girl. Having built up his courage, he took Mary Ann and an interpreter to visit her and to ask her to marry him. In addition to his proposal of marriage, he agreed to care for her sick father and brother, who had typhoid fever.

Since she had full faith in the Gospel and its leaders, she consulted with her father and brother, who approved the proposed marriage. She also concluded: "He is a Bishop and will help care for my loved ones and will give us all security."

In February 1856, they traveled through a snow storm to Salt Lake City where they were married in the Endowment House. Before the ceremony, because of his feelings toward taking a second wife, he acted reluctant. Heber C. Kimball, who had urged him to marry again, observed that he acted somewhat hesitant, and he said, "Brother Hubbard, if you don't marry that girl, I'll do so myself."

Charles and his bride returned to Willard riding in a wagon — a sort of honeymoon in cold, snowy weather. It was the beginning of a life in which religion, labor and affection contributed to a salutary home. Charles, who fulfilled his promises to her, told his children years later: "Although I hesitated to marry your mother, I learned her true worth, and I love her very dearly. I am proud of her and her family."

In July of the same year, he married Sophia Pollard, who was a convert from England.

On August 10, 1856, Charles was called to go on a mission to Europe and was instructed to leave in September. During the month's time at home, he made preparations for the management of the farms and the care of his families. From Church History the following information was obtained, but is not a quote: On September 18 he was at Echo Canyon helping organize the company of Missionaries to cross the Plains. At this time he was appointed Sergeant of the Guards.

When the company reached the Loupe River, they encountered difficulty in crossing it. Heavy autumn rains had made it a swollen, turbulent stream. They obtained canoes, however, and all except Charles and three other men succeeded in crossing without any misfortune. Although the less fortunate four men were thrown into the ice-cold stream when their boat capsized, they were all rescued after being frightened and thoroughly soaked.

After this episode at Loupe River, the company proceeded to New York, and on November 24, 1856, they sailed for England on the ship "Thornton." For a short time after crossing the ocean, Charles was kept in England, then assigned to labor in Scotland, where he performed his missionary duties until his release in the spring of 1858. That year all the missionaries were ordered home because of the apprehensions of the Mormons when Johnston's Army had been sent to Utah.

Crossing the ocean on the "Empire," he experienced a rough and dangerous voyage. The heavy wind lashed the waves, which rose exceedingly high. Fortunately the ship did not crash into any of the numerous large icebergs which were floating nearby in the ocean. With the help of the wind, which propelled them forward, they crossed the ocean in only thirteen days, two weeks earlier than they had expected when they left.

On July 23, 1858, he arrived in Salt Lake City, and then went to Provo, where his families had gone because of the threat of Johnston's Army. Some time later when a peaceful agreement was made with Governor Cummings and the Federal officials, Brigham Young told the Saints to return to their homes.

In 1864 Charles was called by Brigham Young to help colonize St. Thomas, commonly called the Muddy because of the large amount of sediment in the stream which supplied the colony. Besides the water in this tributary of the Virgin River being bad, the heat, wind, and sand made life almost unbearable in this remote locality. Although the colonists could grow good crops of semi-tropical fruit and could grow five crops of alfalfa, they soon discovered that opportunities for prosperity were very meagre. They had no market for the crops they could raise, and, therefore, much poverty prevailed.

When Charles made the first trip to the Muddy, he took Sophia with him, remained there two years. Because of her health they returned to Willard and he took Mary and her three children back with him in 1866. In this unattractive place, where living conditions were disheartening, two of Mary's children were born, Lucynthia Hubbard Robbins and John Hyrum Hubbard.

To help acquire money to maintain his family, Charles secured a contract to carry the mail from St. Thomas to Pioche and Parangat in Nevada. The money he received for this work, however, did not greatly benefit his own family, for he gave generously to other families who were poor and needed assistance.

One of his unpleasant experiences which occurred when he carried the mail was remembered vividly in later years. On one of his trips his horse stumbled and Charles was thrown to the ground. With a dislocated hip he crawled to a stump or stone nearby where he could fasten his leg to it. Then he pulled and twisted until his hip snapped into place. With difficulty he mounted his horse, and the mail arrived on time.

It was in 1870 that Brigham Young released Charles and his family, who returned to Willard, where he spent the rest of his life. Mary, who had formerly lived in two rooms of Mary Ann's house and was desirous of having a home of her own, insisted quietly and firmly when she arrived that Charles should provide it for her. Finally when he promised her that she should have her own home, she knew that it would be provided, for one of his sayings was, "My word is as good as my bond," and he adhered to this principle. As soon as he could he built for her a log house. Then in 1877 he constructed a substantial rock house directly east through the block from Mary Ann's home. This is one of the few pioneer rock houses in Willard which is still being occupied as a home.

On about October 22, 1876, he was called to settle in what is now called Ten Mile Pass in Idaho, a place where the weather was cold and intermittent frosts could be expected even in the summer. He did not take his family to this place; seemingly he did not like it, for he did not remain there long.

During this year and also the following year, he experienced the tragic loss of two of his sons. In 1876 Heber was killed in the canyon east of Willard. The next year John was called on a mission to the Indian territory, now called Oklahoma. He died there and was buried in a small Indian cemetery near the Wichita River.

About this same time he deeded his wife Mary a small farm and home which she occupied, his aim being to protect the interests of Mary and her family and to obviate any possible lawsuit which might arise.

In 1888, Charles, with his son, Willard, went to Gentile Valley in Idaho, where they bought a farm for Willard and his mother, Sophia. Finding the opportunities there promising, Willard remained and cultivated this farm after his father had returned to his home in Willard.

Charles' personal life was characterized by straight-forward and honest dealings with others, by frugality and simplicity in dress and manner of living. Overalls were suitable to wear to church, but the overalls had to be clean. Stylish adornment in clothes he did not approve. An evening meal of bread, milk, and green onions during spring and summer he seemed to enjoy, for this was his usual meal. Unfortunately he had to forego this diet during the last years of his life because onions did not agree with him. Going to bed early and rising early were habitual with him. The lamp was seldom lit in his home summer evenings, unless one of the women was completing some household task or was caring for an ailing child.

Being a great reader, he was fortunate in having excellent eyesight, which he enjoyed to the end of his life. Even during his last years he would read all day without glasses, stopping only to eat his meals or, if the weather was favorable, to walk somewhere for diversion.

There was another activity he seemingly enjoyed and continued several years after he reached the age of eighty. He would ride his old mare, Fan, to look over the fields and especially his large garden, which every year supplied his family with vegetables during the summer and the entire winter.

That religion played an important part in his life has been indicated in his church activities. With sincerity and genuineness in his beliefs, he loved to bear his testimony of the truthfulness of the Gospel, a testimony he delivered with force, strong conviction and deep feeling. A few weeks before his death he walked two blocks to Fast Meeting and bore his testimony in a language and spirit that held the audience in silence and attention. One of the men present said: "There was not a sound in the room other than his voice; many were in tears, the spirit was so strong as he declared he knew that Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God and that Brigham Young was the rightful successor, for he was at the meeting when the mantle fell on Brigham Young. Brigham Young looked like the prophet, and no one who was present could ever doubt that Brigham Young was called of God."

Charles' death on December 19, 1903, concluded a long, full life of nearly ninety-four years, the life of one of Utah's sturdy pioneers who are remembered for a rich contribution to their church, community and state. Charles left a deep imprint not only on his immediate family, but also on his subsequent posterity whose lives reflect many of his cherished ideals.

MARY ANN BOSWORTH HUBBARD

MARY ANN BOSWORTH

Born August 12, 1816 at Sheffield, Massachussetts. Youngest daughter of Jared and Lucy Hubbard Bosworth.

Mary Ann Bosworth was working for an uncle in Monroe, Michigan when she met and married her cousin Charles Wesley Hubbard who was ten years her senior. The bride and groom rode horseback to establish their home in Sheffield.

The following year, they heard of the new religion — Mormonism and the new prophet Joseph Smith. For this religion they left the comforts and security of their home for the hardships and privations suffered by the members of the church as they moved from place to place. Before they settled in Nauvoo, their first child, Noah Ely, died of exposure.

Before they reached their new home among the mountains, they had acquired a rather large family. Their first child, Noah Ely, died of exposure before they settled in Nauvoo. Rhoda Ann, Lucy, John, and Heber were born in Nauvoo and Emma in Clay County, Missouri and Julia in Council Bluffs. Albert and Melinda were born in Ogden after the journey was completed.

The family located in Ogden where Grandfather operated a grist mill. He sold out his interests there and decided to move to California. Grandmother fasted and prayed that they might remain in Utah and when they reached Willard, Grandfather consented to stay there. Three more children were born at Willard, Charles Newton, Permelia, and Clark. Of these twelve children, Grandmother buried nine before her death at ninety-two.

During her early child-bearing, Grandmother contracted milk leg (Plegmasia) and for the rest of her life she dressed an open sore on her leg each day.

Grandmother Hubbard was a charter member of the Relief Society organized by the Prophet Joseph Smith and was first president of the organization in Willard in 1869. She held this position faithfully for thirty-three years. She also taught Sunday School.

Grandmother was a true woman and lady. Her great faith made her an inspiration to all who knew her and her sound judgment and understanding of other's problems made her a source of great strength to all who knew her. She was always well groomed and neat in her person and wherever her home was, it was as beautiful and well-organized as circumstances would permit. Submitted by her granddaughters Rhoda Jones, Julia Welling and Maggie Wood.

A SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF MARY EDWARDS HUBBARD

MARY EDWARDS

Mary Edwards, second wife of Charles Wesley Hubbard, was born May 30, 1835, at Farm Conant, Parish of Llanwenog, Cardinshire, South Wales, the only daughter and second child of John and Ann Jones Edwards.

She and her brother John, joined the L. D. S. Church and accompanied by their parents they sailed from Liverpool, England, April 17, 1855, on the ship "Chimbarazo." After a six weeks passage they arrived at Philadelphia via the Delaware river. From there they went to Mormon Grove in Kansas where they outfitted and headed toward Utah with three yoke of oxen driven by her brother. Their mother died on the trip and was buried in an unmarked grave near Atchinson, Kansas. She never joined the Church though Mr. Edwards did before he died some years later in Utah.

They arrived in Salt Lake City, October 1855, then settled in Willard, Box Elder County, Utah where some of their Welsh friends lived. Their trip from Wales to Willard covered a period of seven months. The expense and difficulty of the trip left them destitute. Therefore they gratefully accepted the offer of an old Welsh friend, a shoemaker, to share a one-room log cabin with dirt floor and roof.

The father and brother were soon stricken with typhoid fever, but Mary nursed them with God's help and they recovered even though food and medicine were scarce. They were kept warm by sagebrush which Mary gathered — the only fuel available — and burned in the large open fireplace. The shoemaker's tapping all day long on the villagers' shoes mingled with Mary's prayers during the cold winter months. But the Edwards family was grateful for a friendly roof in a new land.

Mary had difficulty with the English language but was an able worker and earned food for her brother and father during their long months of illness by washing and housecleaning for more prosperous settlers for which she was paid in flour, potatoes or other items of food.

Like other converts who had immigrated to Zion, she was faithful in her church duties. Her devotion to her church and to her sick father and brother together with her calm, sweet spirit as she did her household chores for her own and others brought her to the attention of the Ward Bishop, Charles W. Hubbard.

Though she was twenty and a very attractive young woman, she had declined all offers of marriage both in Wales and America. However, when Bishop Hubbard, accompanied by his first wife, the mother of eleven children, and an interpreter, asked her to become his second wife she pondered his proposal and, after a time of prayer and consultation with her father and brother, she accepted his offer.

On a cold, snowy February morning they began the sixty-mile trip to Salt Lake City in a covered wagon through deep snow and bitter cold where they were married in February 1856 in the Endowment House by Heber C. Kimball who had previously advised Bishop Hubbard that he should take a second wife to share his ample home.

In 1864 Bishop Hubbard was called by Brigham Young to assist in colonizing St. Thomas, a place in Nevada commonly called "The Muddy" where a small stream emptied into the Virgin River. He accepted the call and took his young wife and three children with him where they lived for nearly four years suffering great hardships in the sandy, hot, dry country. After this time the company of settlers appealed for release and their appeal was granted by President Young. The Hubbards returned happily to Willard with two additional children, John Hyrum and Lucynthia.

On her return, Mary Edwards Hubbard exhibited an interesting facet of her personality which has been recounted by one of her daughters:

"When the family arrived in Willard, mother showed one quality of her personality — a determination to demand what she considered right and advisable. She had lived in the home of the first wife before she went to Nevada, but she decided later that it would be best to have a home for her own family. On the ride back from Nevada, she and father had talked of a home for her and her children, but father made no promise. Mother cared not how humble it might be; she cared only to have her children to herself. Upon arrival the children joyously climbed from the wagon and went to join the other members of the family. Father told mother to get out and go into the house. He and the older boys unhitched the horses to take them to the barn. Then, seeing mother still sitting in the wagon, he said, "Mary, you must be tired. Get out and go into the house. Mary Ann (the first wife) is expecting you." But mother made no move. Father returned from caring for the horses and saw mother still sitting in the wagon. He again said, "Mary, get out and come into the house." Mother made no move, but said, "Charles, we have talked of a home for me. I am now asking you to promise me that you will get me a home where my children and I can be by ourselves." There was no scolding, no storming — just quiet, calm determination. Father knew she meant what she said. He also saw her need. She got her promise.

“The home my mother won by her quiet determination was only a one-room log house, but it was hers and she was satisfied. As time passed, other rooms were added. In 1877 a substantial rock house, which still stands on the main highway through Willard, was built for her. Although she did not have the conveniences desirable in a home and had to work hard during long hours, her home was substantial and comfortable, and she was grateful that it had been provided for her. It was here that four more of her children were born, one of whom died at the age of two years.”

During the rest of her life in Willard she reared her family—eight children grew to maturity, four sons and four daughters—her reputation for calm, sympathy and understanding grew. She was known also for her frugality and the quality of her household skills and husbandry. No one in need ever left her home empty-handed. No one in sickness or in trouble was ever turned away. Because of her sweet influence and soft comforting hands which soothed aches and pains and brought comfort to troubled hearts, she was often sought after by her neighbors needing assistance.

She died June 12, 1893, ten years before her husband. At this writing, February 1955, she has been joined by all her children except Gwen Hubbard Redford.

SOPHIA POLLARD HUBBARD

SOPHIA POLLARD

Sophia Pollard Hubbard, daughter of James Pollard and Sarah Robertshaw, was born 26 February 1831 in Doncaster, England. She became interested in the Gospel of Jesus Christ as taught by the L.D.S. missionaries and joined the Church against the wishes of her father and was turned out of her home. She was baptized June 4, 1850.

By employing her skill at sewing and weaving she was able in three years time to arrange for a voyage to the promised land with a group of saints in 1853. After much hardship she arrived in Salt Lake City in October of the same year. There she found employment in the home of Dr. Willard Richards for two years.

She married Charles Wesley Hubbard June 4, 1856 and lived at Willard, Utah. She was the mother of James W. Hubbard and a daughter who died in infancy, Sarah Ann, born February 1863 and died September 28, 1866.

She accompanied her husband to Nevada to help establish a settlement on the Muddy river called St. Thomas in 1864. They were called on this mission by Brigham Young.

She sacrificed much for the welfare and comfort of her husbands first wife, Mary Ann Bosworth. She stayed with her and took care of her during a long period of illness and had to wait on her hand and foot. She was very kind and dedicated her entire life to the service of others.

In her later life she spent most of her time with her son, Willard, in the Gentile Valley, assisting much in the pioneering of what is now known as Gem Valley. Later she lived in Logan with the family. She suffered much affliction with a broken hip and other injuries. Through all of the trials and hardships that were her lot in life she was a loving, kind, humble, and devoted member of the family and a true member of the church that she sacrificed so much for early in life.

She died in Logan 19 June, 1921 and was buried in the Willard cemetery.

BIOGRAPHY OF JULIA CYNTHIA HUBBARD BARKER

JULIA CYNTHIA HUBBARD BARKER AND BYRON BARKER

Julia Cynthia Hubbard Barker, daughter of Charles Wesley Hubbard and Mary Ann Bosworth, was born in Council Bluffs, Iowa, April 3, 1848.

Her parents were both born in Sheffield, Mass. She died in Willard, Utah at the age of ninety-three.

They joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints soon after it was organized. After the death of the Prophet Joseph Smith, they went to Council Bluffs, Iowa, to prepare to cross the plains to come to the Rocky Mountains.

While they lived there, Julia was born. She was the seventh child. When she was two months old, they began the long and tedious journey with the Heber C. Kimball Co. arriving in Salt Lake City, Utah in August 1848. They moved to Ogden, Utah, and built a small adobe house there. Four years later they moved twelve miles north to Willard, Utah. They built a three-room log house on a farm in the north part of town west of the cemetery.

Julia was a happy, lively child. She learned to spin, card and dye wool, make tallow candles, sew and knit. All clothing was made by hand. Clothes were washed on a wash board. Julia was brought up in cleanliness and industry and taught to help wherever a helping hand was needed. The children were given some recreation, for Julia was given dancing lessons by George Marsh. She was very fond of dancing and horse-back riding.

It was customary in those days to hold cottage meetings in the homes. At one of such meetings Ann Blye Barker, wife of Frederick Barker of Ogden got up and spoke in tongues. She prophesied that Julia would someday be a member of their family. Circumstances however delayed the fulfillment of the prophecy.

At about the same time a man by the name of Henry Wells was working for Julia's father. He came in one day after being baptized and Julia asked him what he had been doing to get his hair wet, and he remarked, "I have been baptized, and I'm going to get married," "Who are you going to marry?" asked Julia. "I'm going to marry you, your father said I could." She was not in love with him. She did not want to marry him, but her father was firm, a promise made was to be kept.

Her health had not been the best for three or four years prior to her marriage and someone had told her father it would be improved if she married. After her marriage she became more and more unhappy. She asked her mother if she could not return home to live. The answer was "No" you have married him. "If you will not let me come home I will ask Sister Pitkin if I may live with her. I'll sew to pay for my board," said Julia. Then her mother consented she return home to live.

In the early days many marriages were planned by the fathers.

In August 1866 she gave birth to a son whom she named Charles Albert Wells. He was known throughout life as Bert Wells. He lived with Julia until he was a young man. Then he went to Gentile Valley with his uncle, James Willard Hubbard.

On December 7, 1867 Ann Barker's prophecy was fulfilled. Julia and Byron Barker were married, Byron was the son of Frederick and Ann Blye, Barker. They were married in the Endowment house in Salt Lake City by Heber C. Kimball, uniting them for time and eternity.

They settled in a small house in Ogden near Washington Boulevard and 12th St. Here five children were born. They were: George Byron, Stella, Emma, Mary Ann and Charles. At the end of ten years, they traded their property to Ambrose Shaw for a ranch and cattle at Promontory, Utah. They lived there one summer, then moved to South Willard, on the Pearson farm where on March 25, 1879 their sixth child was born whom they named Mae.

Byron arranged with his father-in-law to buy fifteen acres of ground of the farm west of the cemetery, and in the month of May moved into a shop he had built earlier. Soon he built a two room log house with a cellar on the north. Julia was very happy and comfortable at this place.

She brooded early spring chickens and sold them to buy material for clothing. She helped her boys to raise garden while their father was doing carpenter work. Her busy fingers moved quickly to knit and sew for others to help meet expenses. To those who had fruit, she went and dried fruit and corn on shares to supply the winters food. In summer when wild plums were ripe, they gathered them and put them into large crock jars. Then made a boiling hot soda solution and poured it over the plums to keep them until molasses time, when they took them to the molasses mill to be mixed with molasses and made into preserves.

During the spring and summer of 1860, Julia and all six children had measles. Julia was very ill because it was just a few months before she was to give birth to another child. On Sept. 17, 1880 a baby girl was born whom they named Pamela Elizabeth. On April 30, 1882 Vilate was born. Frederick Clark was born Sept. 8, 1884. When Fred was just a few weeks old she went to the Temple. There she was promised that one day her children would rise up and call her blessed. That was an occasion in her life.

On December 30, 1885 Matilda their tenth child was born.

In 1888 there was an epidemic of measles and scarlet fever. The last four children who hadn't had measles got them, followed by scarlet fever. Julia was a natural nurse. She successfully nursed them all through that seige. But Matilda who was last to take the disease, just recovered from scarlet fever when she became ill again. Spinal menningitis had set in. She died May 12, 1888.

Ethel Lavern was born July 28, 1888. She looked much like Tilda and had a sweet disposition. She helped fill the vacancy and ease the hurt left by Tilda's death. On January 16, 1892 Leo Clyde was born.

At that time there were no hospitals to take sick patients to. All sickness was taken care of in the homes, confinements and all.

No matter how little she made, one tenth was paid in tithing. Many times work piled up when the children were in school, but she would never keep a child out to help. She wanted them to get an education.

The vegetable garden did not bring enough, so it was decided to plant plowed ground to fruit trees. The place was mortgaged and flowing wells were dug to insure plenty of water. When fruit trees were old enough to bear fruit, Julia worked in the orchard picking fruit to be hauled to North Ogden. This way she helped to meet the payments.

In the late summer of 1897 several cases of typhoid fever broke out in the town. Vilate and Elizabeth were among the sick. Elizabeth died September 27, 1897.

Julia was put in president of the Relief Society in 1901 and served in that capacity until 1903. Being somewhat discouraged they moved to St. Anthony, Idaho. While at St. Anthony she did practical nursing for Dr. Horsberg. She was satisfied at this work, but her husband was not so well and so they returned to Willard in 1905 where their son-in-law, Samuel Norton Cook gave them a free life interest in a two acre farm in South Willard which had a two room house, a flowing well and a stable. Here she raised lovely berries and beautiful flowers.

She was president of the South Willard Primary while living at this place.

They owned a light one seated vehicle and a gentle horse with which she drove to all her meetings.

When her youngest son, Leo joined the navy, before World War I broke out, she once more took up practical nursing. There was hardly a home in the town she had not nursed in one sickness or another. She took care of one sickness after another in many cases looking after the needs of the rest of the family as well as the confined mother, and only at a small fee. Julia was entirely devoted to her patients as was displayed in her work. The entire town respected and loved her dearly. They had confidence when she was there to take over. She loved the work.

The trial of her life came when old age forced her to retire. Many of her warmest friends were once her patients.

Julia was the mother of thirteen children, eleven of whom reached maturity. She was left a widow at the age of seventy-nine.

On January 6, 1937 she fell on the floor, breaking her leg below the hip. When it healed it was an inch short, thus causing her to become lame, but by use of a cane she still received much enjoyment out of life.

Open house was held for her on April 3, 1938. The occasion being her ninetieth birthday anniversary. She experienced great joy at having the privilege of renewing old friendships again. She loved life and people.

When the family lived on the farm west of the cemetery, they owned one cow which had been dry most of the winter. The family was starved for good fresh milk. Finally the cow freshened and how happy the family was. Now they could have plenty of milk. When the milk was good for the family to use, the father went out one morning to milk the cow and there she lay dead. She had eaten poison parsnips and had died during the night. The family all mourned the loss. It was certainly a disappointment and a disaster.

Julia was a charter member of the Willow Creek Camp of D.U.P. All the camps entertained their Pioneers with a dinner and show at Brigham City. She was the last of the original pioneers of Willard. That summer she felt tired and feeble.

October 1 she attended her last D. U. P. meeting, for that evening she fell again and broke her hip in the joint. It never healed. She died January 30, 1939, and was buried in the Willard cemetery.

MELINDA HUBBARD AND WILLIAM MERRELL

MELINDA MARY HUBBARD MERRELL

Mother's real name was Melinda, but everyone knew her as Dinnie, a name given her by her little brother Clark who could not say Melinda. She was born just before midnight on December 31 and she said if she had been born an hour later, she would have been a year older.

The Hubbards lived in an adobe house in North Ogden at this time, but six weeks later Grandfather was called to be bishop in a new settlement — Willard.

The work of the large pioneer family was very strenuous. The women did washing, carding and spinning of the wool for cloth, weaving it and fashioning all the family clothing. The mothers were so busy that the baby tending was almost entirely taken over by the older girls. Mother's sister Emma took entire charge of her and Mother said that one of the first things she remembered was being heart-broken when fifteen year old Emma died. Mother was four years old at that time.

Dinnie became baby tender at about nine years old. There were three little brothers — Joseph, Willard, and Clark. On the rare occasions when she could get all of the boys to sleep at once, she made a bower for herself in the old rock wall and played with her rag doll, Emma.

Melinda revered Aunt Sophia who had charge of the sewing and clothing making for the family. She always understood the children and defended them in their troubles. Her older brother John became her idol. because he never teased her as the other boys did. When he came home from the fields, he let her ride the tired work horse to the barn and together they hunted for eggs in the hay.

Mother went to school to Will Wright for her early education and later attended the University of Deseret. In the evening, there were often spelling bees. The only person that Melinda couldn't spell down was Will Merrell.

Part of the social life of the young people included going to Brigham City for dances. They would leave after the chores were done and come home as the sun was rising. Mother's beaux were usually either Ed Southwick or John Bankhead. At the age of fifteen, as Melinda walked in one wagon track and Ed in the other, he asked her to marry him. She refused because she felt she was too young.

At the age of twenty-four, she was really an old maid. It was then that she married her old spelling rival, Will Merrell. They traveled to Salt Lake City to the Endowment House with another couple. The trip by wagon was so slow that they had to stop over night at Bountiful.

Mother and father started their married life in a small house that still stands in South Willard. By Barker, Jr., later bought this house. The honeymoon was short, for six weeks after their marriage they received a call to go to Arizona to help with a Mormon colony. They left with a team of four horses and a wagon with a trail wagon behind for supplies and a bed.

It took more than a month to travel to Camp Obed on the Little Colorado River. The trip was very enjoyable, for they enjoyed the beauties of the scenery. However, the camp was situated in a very swampy place and father became ill. He was put to bed in the wagon and mother drove to the mountains where they stayed with a friend until he recovered.

As they traveled back to the camp, they visited Indian villages and learned much about the surrounding country. When they arrived at the camp, it was deserted. It had seemed advisable to move to higher ground. Here the thirty or more families built a large fort and called it Sunset.

This camp was a branch of the United Order then practiced by the Church in selected places. A large building in the center of the enclosure contained the kitchen, bakery, dining room and laundry. The families lived in units built around the walls and ate in the common dining room. They all sang, worked and prayed together. Part of the time, father herded the sheep in the mountains and he and mother lived in a tent.

Grandfather had three wives, so that the majority of the Hubbard family was born in plural marriage, but mother was the only one to live in it in her own marriage. After three years of marriage without children, mother was told by a doctor that she would probably be childless all her life. It was then that she and father talked of plural marriage and chose Frances Adams as father's second wife. Mother went with them to St. George to be married and she was given a promise of a son of her own.

True to this blessing, a son was born a year later. This was a month after Aunt Fannie gave birth to a daughter. The son was named John Hubbard Merrell. Mother's happiness was short-lived, for she went with father on a trip to get supplies when the baby was fifteen months old and he became ill and died. He was buried in a small town near Kanab called Johnson.

The next year another daughter was born to Aunt Fannie. On Christmas day she brought the baby to mother and said to her, "this baby daughter is yours." This example of unselfish love united the two wives for the rest of their lives.

Three other children were born to mother and May went back to her mother, but she had comforted my mother through many lonely months. My youngest brother, Jared Bosworth, died at the age of seven, so only two of us, my brother Charles and I grew to maturity.

The members of the order at Sunset were told to go on to Mexico after eight years in Arizona. At this time, the polygamists were being persecuted and they journeyed to safety beyond the Mexican border.

Our family moved to Colonia Diaz where father established a tannery. We were always poor, but never destitute. We worked and played hard and had a happy family life.

The people in the town, numbering about 750, all adopted mother as Aunt Din. She helped in every home where there was sickness. During an epidemic of diphtheria she went from house to house taking care of the sick and the dying. We kept a tub of water outside of our house and mother would come home in the night, bathe and change her clothes and go back to her work. Sometime she would come in and cook some food for us or discuss problems, but we never contracted the disease.

Mother was always a faithful church member and presided over the Mutual for many years. She had many hardships, for father fell from a tree when he was fifty and was killed. Legally she could have had half of the property, but instead, she had the property evaluated and divided into thirteen parts. This meant ten for Aunt Fannie and her nine children and three for mother and her two. It is no wonder that all of the children in both families loved her and thought of her as a second mother.

After my marriage, I moved to Utah. While mother was visiting me, Pancho Villa's revolution drove the Mormons out of Mexico. For the rest of her life, she made her home with me and my family of six. My husband died six years later, so she became most important in our lives. At her death at eighty-seven, each of my children mourned her as a much loved mother.

Mother was never idle. After the children were old enough, she worked in the Temple for many years. She did all types of hand work and was always sweet, cheerful and optimistic. She truly exemplified the valiant pioneer mother.

SKETCH OF CHARLES NEWTON HUBBARD'S LIFE

CHARLES NEWTON HUBBARD AND REBECCA JANE DAVIS

Charles Newton Hubbard was born in Willard, Utah, December 5, 1853, the tenth child of Charles Wesley Hubbard and Mary Ann Bosworth. He had all the education that was available at that time; was a very good penman but never found time to write any of his accomplishments. Throughout his life he filled many positions in civic and church capacities. He took part in the Willard Dramatic Association.

He was married to Rebecca Jane Davis, 6 June, 1877. They settled on a farm which was very productive as he was a good farmer. Four children were born to this union.

He filled a mission to the Southern States, leaving September 18, 1888. It was during this time that his wife died. It was very hard to locate him but through the kindness of relatives, they kept her body frozen by carrying ice from the mountains until he could get home. His older children remember the sorrow and hardships their father went through trying to keep the little family together. He had contracted malaria on his mission which left him in poor health but he never neglected his family or his church.

He married Mary Cowles in the Logan Temple, March 17, 1892. She very capably shared the responsibility of his home and family. To this union three children were born.

He owned and operated a molasses mill. At the time of his death he was farming 160 acres. One of his statements was "when I was young, I bought more land to grow more corn to feed more pigs to buy more land, and now I am old, I have an elephant on my hands and don't know what to do with it."

Charles Newton died March 27, 1923, at the age of 69.

DAVID CLARK HUBBARD'S FAMILY

DAVID CLARK HUBBARD AND CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH MORGAN

David Clark Hubbard, b. 7 Feb. 1860, d. 22 Aug. 1908.

Charlotte Elizabeth Morgan, b. 23 Dec. 1865, d. 6 Feb. 1944.

David Clark Hubbard, the youngest of twelve children, was born February 7, 1860, in Ogden, Utah, to Charles Wesley and Mary Ann Bosworth Hubbard. Clark attended the Willard Elementary school, and after graduation, he enrolled at the University of Deseret, which is now the University of Utah. In June, 1882, he was graduated with a diploma from the academic and normal departments. His main interests were English and literature. Clark returned to Willard where he successfully taught school. His students respected him, for his academic standards were high, and he was a good disciplinarian. While teaching, he fell in love with a young teacher, Charlotte Elizabeth Morgan. She proved to be a splendid helpmate to Clark and their union was a very happy one. Clark's interests encompassed the educational, religious, political, civic, and social life of his community and county. For sixteen years, he was Superintendent of Schools in Box Elder County, and his efforts helped in securing the consolidation of the county schools. In the fall of 1894, he was called on to serve a mission in the Southern States where he remained until the spring of 1897.

Again home, he plunged into his various activities: religious, civic, educational. He was superintendent of the Willard Sunday School, member of the High Council, president of the Box Elder Board of Education, and a member of the Board of Trustees at the Utah State Agricultural College. For a period of two terms he was elected to the Utah State Legislature. On August 22, 1908, at the age of forty-eight, he passed away, leaving his wife and eleven children.

Charlotte Elizabeth Morgan (Lottie), wife of Clark, was born in Willard, December 23, 1865. She was a capable, self-reliant individual with a gay, vivacious personality. Participation in "Home Dramatics" was enjoyed by Lottie and Clark. For many years she was active in the Mutual and Relief Society Organizations. After the death of Clark, she managed the farm and at her death at seventy-eight, she was a successful dairy farm operator. She inspired and assisted her children to attend college and develop, to the utmost, their potentialities.

MARY ELIZABETH HUBBARD AND HUSBAND THOMAS TAYLOR

13A

Mary Elizabeth Hubbard, daughter of Charles Wesley Hubbard and Mary Edwards, was born 5 November 1856, at Willard, Utah. She married Thomas Taylor, 18 Jan. 1875, at Salt Lake City, Utah. He was born 8 Sept. 1850, Montrose Lee, Iowa. He died 26 Aug. 1921. She died 13 Jan. 1934 at Burley, Idaho.

Lizzie, as she was lovingly called, was good looking and attractive, with a personality that won friends and respect wherever she went. She was a leader in the community in which she lived, holding responsible positions in her Church.

She, her husband and small family, moved to Elba, Idaho, in 1882 and pioneered that country. They prospered in their undertakings, one of which was a general merchandising store. A house was built near the store and much of the success of this venture was due to her management and attention. Elba was a long way from any trading center. The goods were freighted in from Utah or Kelton, the nearest R. R. station. They bought untrimmed hats, ribbon, flowers, etc., and Lizzie trimmed and sold those hats. She had no training, but had an innate artistic sense.

When the water was taken out of Snake River, they moved to Burley, Idaho, where they lived the remainder of their lives. In business, at church, or as a hostess, she was a charming, gracious person.

JOSEPH HUBBARD AND SALLEY ANN MARSH

14A

Joseph Hubbard, son of Charles Wesley Hubbard and Mary Edwards, was born 20 Oct. 1859 in Willard, Utah. When he was a small boy he went with his father to southern Utah, then returned to Willard, where he worked with his father on a farm until he married Salley Ann Marsh, 1880. He was an active citizen in civic life in Willard, bishop of the ward ten years, temple worker in Hawaii and Salt Lake City until shortly before his death 28 Oct. 1932. A firm believer in the values derived from a devout religious life and also from work, he strove to inculcate his ideals in his family and others with whom he associated. One of his salient beliefs was that only an industrious and honest person can truly serve mankind and the Lord.

Salley Ann Marsh, daughter of George J. and Jane Marsh, was born 11 Nov. 1861 in Willard, Utah. She was an energetic worker and leader in the church and civic activities in Willard. With her husband she did Temple work in Hawaii and with him was called to continue as a regular officiator in the Salt Lake Temple until a few years before her death, 12 Dec. 1948, in Salt Lake City. Her belief, consistent with that of her husband, was that education as well as religious training is essential to each individual and that it enhances one's abilities to live a full life in the church and community.

LUCYNTHIA HUBBARD AND HUSBAND LORENZO WILSON ROBBINS

18A

Lucynthia Hubbard Robbins, daughter of Charles Wesley Hubbard and Mary Edwards, was born May 22, 1869 at St. Thomas, Piute County, Nevada, which was formerly called the "Muddy" and is now covered by Lake Mead. Her father had been called on a Mission by Brigham Young to settle on the "Muddy." Her mother had been called on a Mission by Brigham Young to settle on the "Muddy." When he was released from the Mission, they returned to Willard and her girlhood days were spent there.

She taught school at Perry, Box Elder County, when she was sixteen years old. She was married to Lorenzo Wilson Robbins on the 8th day of May, 1887 in the Logan Temple. Their first home was at a Saw Mill operated by her husband at Elba, Idaho. From Elba, they moved to Oakley, Idaho. She taught school at Oakley while her husband was on a mission for three years. She was Cassia Stake Relief Society Secretary for seventeen years, and she was active in other church work at Oakley.

They were one of the first settlers to file on a homestead at Burley, Idaho in 1905, which was before the Minidoka dam was built.

Her husband was the first bishop of Burley, which ward and branches covered a territory now consisting of a number of Stakes. She and her husband were gracious hosts, and no one was turned away from their door. Their guests consisted of the General Authorities of the L. D. S. Church, when attending conference or holding special meetings at Burley or Oakley, also settlers would come and stay with them, and people who lived on the project stayed with them. It was the exception when there was not a guest at their home.

She was always active in the L. D. S. Church. She kept all the early records of the Burley Ward. She taught in relief society and mutual, and a finer teacher could not be found.

She was the mother of seven children, four of whom lived to maturity.

She was only 44 years of age when she died on April 6, 1914. As a token of appreciation and esteem, the business houses of Burley closed during the funeral, and practically everyone on the entire project attended the funeral. The floral offering was the largest that had ever been seen in Burley.

JENNIE HUBBARD AND HUSBAND EZRA T. LLOYD

Jennie (Jane) Hubbard, daughter of Charles Wesley Hubbard and Mary Edwards, was born 8 Feb. 1872, Willard, Utah. She married Ezra T. Lloyd, 23 Dec. 1897, Logan Temple. He was born 10 February 1871.

She started teaching school at the early age of sixteen. She was saving and could always make a dollar do its full work. Even though her wages were small she saved enough to go to the L.D.S. College in Salt Lake City for a year, returning to Willard to teach school the next year. Later she attended the U.S.A.C. and a summer session in Chicago. She was Superintendent of the Logan City Schools for two years. Shortly after her marriage her husband was called on a mission to England. Jennie taught school in his absence and went to England when he was released. They toured Europe before returning. One of the most interesting places visited was her mother's birthplace in Wales. She was a very successful genealogist. The Hubbard family owes much to her untiring genealogical research.

At the age of 73 she had a stroke, after which she was never her normal self. Her husband was devoted and loving, caring for her with untiring devotion. She died 30 Dec. 1954.

ALMA EDWARDS HUBBARD AND MANA WILLIAMS

20A

Alma Edwards Hubbard, son of Charles Wesley Hubbard and Mary Edwards was born 13 Apr. 1874. He married Mana Williams on 11 November, 1896. She was born 29 June, 1872. Immediately after their marriage he left on a four-year mission to Australia for the L.D.S. Church, but when he had been there about two years he was called home to be Bishop of Grace Ward in Idaho. The ward was small in numbers but large in area.

He and his wife Mana pioneered in Gentile Valley, now called Gem Valley. The soil was rich which gave promise of good crops, but it needed water before anything but sagebrush and wild grasses would grow. One could stand outside the log cabin on their homestead and look over the valley and little could be seen but miles of sagebrush.

Bear River ran through the valley. The idea of a canal was soon thought of. He was one of the men who fought and worked to put the project of the Last Chance Canal through to completion. This canal would take the water from Bear River and with a system of canals would irrigate this large sagebrush flat. This accomplishment turned miles of practically desert country into rich fertile land. The canal irrigates 30,000 acres of land at the present time.

He was progressive and ambitious. With the aid of his wife and children he acquired quite a lot of land and livestock. He took an active part in all civic and church activities. When he died 8 August 1938, the people of the whole valley mourned for they knew they had lost a real leader. His wife Mana lives at 344 East 3rd North, Logan, Utah.

JAMES WILLARD HUBBARD

JAMES WILLARD HUBBARD AND EMMA PETTINGILL

James Willard Hubbard, son of Charles Wesley Hubbard and Sophia Pollard, was born 12 February, 1861 at Willard Utah. When he was about three years old, he was taken by his parents to St. Thomas, Nevada, where they remained for two years before returning to Willard. After being in Willard for three more years they went again to St. Thomas. He attended school there for two years and then went back again to Willard to finish his education, such as it was, and assist with the work on his fathers farm. He was his mothers only son. A sister, two years younger, died when she was three years old.

He married Emma Pettingill on 20 January 1880. In 1883 they moved to a farm at Raft River and spent five years trying to make a go of it there. In 1888 he gave it up and moved to a farm at Bench in Gentile Valley, Idaho, where he established a home under pioneer conditions.

He was a man of exceptional ability in many ways. A natural builder, he loved to get the timber from the near-by canyons, make it into lumber with his own sawmill, and build up his farm and home with his own hands and the help of a good and faithful wife and mother of a fast growing family. With much hard work, perseverance, and sacrifice, they were able to make a home and a start on a life's mission of raising a good family of eight daughters and one son. Two of the daughters died in childhood, and the two youngest died in young womanhood after marriage.

A great blessing and opportunity came to him when he accepted a call to fill a mission to the Southern States in 1895. This required much sacrifice on the part of his good wife and family to carry on under trying circumstances for the two years that he was away. The experience in the mission field qualified him for a greater mission and service for the church in establishing the work of the Lord in the Gentile Valley and Bannock Stake.

He served as the first Bishop of the Bench Ward from 1904 until 1907 when he and his family moved to California for a few months. He was a high councilman for a number of years. This entailed traveling long distances by team which sometimes required two days to fill an assignment to a far away Ward.

He possessed a gift for laying his hands on people and blessing them. He was called in to many homes to administer to the sick and brought comfort and blessing to many people especially after being ordained a Patriarch on May 8, 1919. Most of his children and grandchildren received a blessing by him.

After retiring from the farm in 1919 he moved to Logan, Utah where he rendered much service as a patriarch. He also worked in the temple and assisted in gathering much genealogy of the Hubbard family.

Truly it can be said that he placed first and foremost the work of establishing and building the Kingdom of God on earth. It was not his lot to possess wealth of this world's goods, but he obtained a treasure of knowledge and the blessing of a life of honest service to his fellow men and to the church. He was called to leave this stage of existence 15 September 1939 in Logan. He was buried in Logan cemetery.

Sophia Chlotilda Hubbard, daughter of James Willard Hubbard and Emma Maria Pettingill, born 6 Dec. 1881, Willard, Utah. In the spring of 1888 the family moved to a farm at Bench, Gentile Valley, Idaho. There was much hard work and pioneering in this new country and Chloe did her part. She attended school in an old log school house at Trout Creek, traveling several miles through winter snow and many times in zero weather. She also attended the B.Y.C. in Logan for two years.

She married Henry Noah Mickelson, 31 July 1903. He was born 29 Dec. 1878, Hjorring, Denmark. Henry's parents and family came to America when Henry was three years old settling in Gentile Valley. The father died when Henry was 12 years old, leaving the family to carry on alone. Henry did his share working with them until 17 years old.

The young couple after their marriage moved to Teton where land was cheap. In 1919 they moved to Arco and in 1930 to Idaho Falls, Idaho. When Chloe and Henry were married, he was not a member of the L.D.S. Church, but joined when he was 32, and as soon as possible they were married in Logan Temple and their five children sealed to them. He was an ardent church worker.

One and a half years after his baptism, he was chosen Bishop's Counselor, he filled a mission to the Western States, was Bishop of Arco Ward, Stake President of Lost River Stake, Stake Supt. of Sunday School, Idaho Falls Stake, also many minor positions, all of which he filled efficiently. Chloe was not far behind her husband in doing her part in Church work, holding responsible positions in Y.L.M.I.A., Sunday School and Relief Society in the various wards in which they lived. Address: Iona, Idaho.
